Fall 2008 Edition

The Importance of Human Rights Education in Africa Today

It is evident that the majority of people in Africa are each day being denied their basic human rights by individuals, government or social groups knowingly or unknowingly. This is because the issue of people's rights is only becoming new to many Africans considering the poverty rate in Africa, civil war, rapes, injustices, etc. One needs not to have a second thought of the need for human rights education in every sector of our African society.

Human rights education is very important in Africa today since it will help people know and understand that like every other person they are entitled to the same basic rights.

It will help fight poverty and injustices in Africa.
-The issue of child labor, girl's education, gender equality and equal opportunity will be addressed.
-It will give hope and future to many Africans especially children and women who are most abused in Africa.

Global Youth Coalition on HIV/AIDS (GYCA) Despite the debilitating effects of AIDS, young leaders are taking action in their communities to prevent the spread of the disease and to address the devastating consequences of the pandemic. In fact, evidence shows that young people are most effective at changing the risk behaviors of their peers and at shaping a better future for themselves and their families. The Global Youth Coalition on HIV/AIDS (GYCA) recognizes the potential of young leaders as the best force to address AIDS in their own communities, and empowers them with the knowledge, skills, resources and opportunities they need to scale up and expand their initiatives.
